NEW PODCAST SERIES TO HELP FARMERS GET IT MORE RIGHT, MORE OFTEN

Navigating the complexities of on-farm decision-making just got easier for Aussie grain growers.

A new five-part podcast series, Navigating On-Farm Risk & Rewards: Getting It More Right, More Often, delivers expert insights to help farmers manage risk and capture rewards.

The series features engaging conversations with five respected experts in farming, consulting, climate science, applied research, and risk management.

Episodes aim to simplify decision-making while tackling the complex factors that often feel overwhelming.

Hosted by Annabelle Homer, founder of Voicelt, the podcast is part of RiskWi$e—a five-year GRDC-funded national project led by CSIRO.

RiskWi$e focuses on improving risk and reward outcomes for grain growers across Australia by supporting strategic on-farm decision-making.

Barry Mudge, Dr Kate Burke, Danielle Lannin England, Peter Hayman, and Rebekah Allen are among the featured guests who share personal approaches to managing farm risk while inspiring growers to challenge their own perspectives and improve outcomes.

The series trailer is now available on Spotify and Apple Podcasts, offering a sneak peek into the practical advice and actionable strategies farmers can look forward to.

Episode 1, On-Farm Risk & Reward, Understanding The Basics, with Barry Mudge is coming soon.
